

Notifiable disease extension – clarity brings peace of mind

Our Business Interruption proposition now provides greater reassurance to your customers by clearly stating the infectious diseases it covers.

The ongoing concern around potential outbreaks of globally transmitted diseases has been heightened in recent weeks with news of the swine flu outbreak. For commercial customers, it is therefore essential that they have clarity and reassurance around the cover provided within their insurance policy.

What has changed?

The wording of our notifiable disease extension has changed to ensure it now clearly states the notifiable diseases which are covered under this policy.

What do my customers need to do?

No action is needed by you or your customers who have a policy with notifiable disease extension cover. We shall be changing our current renewals in the near future and you will be notified when this has happened.

What does this mean for new customers?

All new customers who either extend their cover to include notifiable disease or where cover is provided automatically will benefit from the new wording, as will existing customers who are looking to extend their existing policies to include the cover.

“The revised wording addresses customer concerns by offering greater clarity and reassurance.”
